Fire Investigation in the 21st Century - Tactics, Tools & Tech!

Description:

This workshop is designed to help develop the skills necessary for a thorough and effective fire claim investigation. Claims professionals will acquire the tools and perspectives needed to ensure cost effective utilization of experts, to avoid common dangerous mistakes, and to minimize exposure to legal liability in the context of the overall claim resolution goals. We will introduce, discuss and analyze tools and technology that enhances the fire investigation far beyond that of just a few years ago. Cellular Telephone Photos and Video, Security Video, Satellite, LIDAR, Computer Fire Models, Automated Fire Protection Systems, Internet of Things, Auto-Infotainment Systems and Drones are technology that have significantly improved; providing unique information, perspective and data that can aid the fire investigator in determining the origin and cause of a fire. This engaging program utilizes visually compelling fire case examples to illustrate the current state of the art/science of forensic fire investigations, and to help claims professionals and SIU Investigators ensure a complete and proper investigation in a fire-related case. This presentation will include: live burn videos, extensive photography, and exhibits to illustrate and reinforce the Learning Objectives. Real life examples drawn from investigations handled by the presenters will be utilized throughout the presentation to engage the attendees in applying the lessons outlined by the Learning Objectives.

Found the Footprints? Now What? Claims Investigation, Preservation, and Admission of Social Media Evidence at Trial

Description:

In the last decade, social media has become a component of everyday life for billions around the world. It also serves as a rich source of material for carriers and defense counsel to employ in claims investigations and litigation, but its admission at trial and use in front of a jury can be tricky. This presentation will discuss tools and techniques that can be used by carriers and defense counsel to obtain, develop, and preserve social media evidence for use in trial. But more importantly, this presentation will provide a road map for its admission at trial.

Remote Claims Management*Description:

The goal of this presentation is to discuss the changing working environment of the average claims professional both before and after COVID-19 measures were put in place. As teleworking became more popular, many insurance companies maintained their offices with a full claims staff. However, these companies were forced into remote claims operations on very short notice due to the pandemic. This paradigm shift has required many claims leaders and individual contributors to work from home for the first time. Additionally, seasoned teleworkers were facing unique challenges due to the impact of an influx of non-traditional teleworkers. We will discuss what defines a remote working environment, some of the common individual and leadership challenges that arise as a result of this working environment shift, how coverage conversations and file reviews are affected, what it means to be “present” to your insured, the challenges of maintaining DOI compliance, as well as some useful solutions on how to remain effective, both as a manager and as an adjuster.

How, When and Why to Employ New Tech in Auto Loss Evaluations: Three Case Studies

Description:

This session is designed to help develop the skills necessary for employing new technology to perform a thorough and effective auto loss investigation. Claims professionals will acquire the tools and perspectives needed to ensure cost effective utilization of tech when necessary, to avoid common dangerous mistakes in using the wrong tech for the wrong application, and to minimize exposure to future bad faith claims. We will introduce, discuss and analyze the newest technological advances in claims investigation. Cellular telephone tower data, street surveillance systems, LPR systems, Auto-Infotainment Systems, ADR downloads, personal devices such as tablets and watches will be evaluated and discussed in order to provide up to date information to aid the Claims Investigator and counsel in making the most precise claims decisions. This program will utilize and evaluate this information from the perspective of three separate claim scenarios, actual cases that will be plucked from carrier records without revealing any identities. Each case will be discussed from application for insurance through claims decision. This presentation will also include: recorded statement excerpts, claim note analysis, review of expert reports, review and analysis of phone tower records, review of LPR and EDR data downloads and other evidence gathered during the claims process. The ultimate objective will be to use real life examples drawn from investigations handled by the presenters to engage the attendees in applying the lessons outlined by the Learning Objectives.

Reverse Course! Federal Courts Are Blocking Payment of Cannabis Insurance Claims

Description:

The question of whether commercial cannabis operations were legally insurable appeared well-settled as states began legalizing recreational use in the mid to late 2010's. However, over the past year several Federal judges began using the Controlled Substances Act to preempt state laws with renewed vigor. This trend has once again cast doubt upon whether any insurance contract requiring payment of business income claims to a commercial cannabis operation is void. A collision between Federal prohibition under the Controlled Substances Act and state legality may now be imminent.

Driving a Culture of Ethics & Integrity in Property Casualty Insurance

Description:

Insurance professionals are faced with issues involving ethical implications on a daily basis. Many issues are easily identified and addressed. However, some issues require a great deal of consideration for even the most "ethical" of professionals. The distinction between what is legal and what is ethical is not always clear. Ethical implications and challenges necessarily have a dramatic impact on insurance operations and potential liabilities. All professionals in the Insurance Industry must have an understanding of the concepts and principles surrounding ethics and how it impacts the industry.

This presentation focuses on both historical and current factors that have given rise to ethical challenges in the Property & Casualty insurance industry, and will offer solutions to P&C professionals to confront and surmount those challenges.

COVID-19: Insurance Coverage Implications Arising from a Global Pandemic

Description:

COVID-19 has brought the world to a standstill. In just over a year, it infected over 116 million people in over 200 countries. Approximately 2.6 million people died. The specter and realization of increases in the number of infected and dead continues even as vaccines roll out throughout the world. In its wake, COVID-19 has not only threatened the health of the global population, but has shaken the core of the global economy, resulting in losses estimated to be in the trillions of dollars. The impact of COVID-19 on the insurance industry is significant as the exposures arising from this global pandemic prompt an analysis of myriad insurance risks under a variety of products for first-party property and business interruption benefits, event cancellations, and liability claims. This presentation will explore the emergence of COVID-19, its impact on insurance risks, and how courts in the United States are addressing COVID-19 litigation.

High Exposure Commercial Liability Claims: Deflating the Inflated Demands

Description:

Commercial liability claims are becoming increasingly more costly to insurers. Recent studies show that unresolved general liability claims result in lawsuits at least 35 percent of the time. Studies further show that a lawsuit can increase the average general liability claim by more than $75,000 to defend and settle. The increased costs are being driven by unscrupulous public adjusters, attorneys, medical providers, and others, who continue to develop creative and questionable strategies to force the insurers into quicker and more costly settlements. This session will explore some of the more recent strategies being utilized by these parties including, but not limited to, expensive and questionable medical procedures, "reptile brain" theory trial tactics, partnering with "factoring" (investment) companies, submitting time limit demands, to name a few. This session will provide practical and effective methods of adjusting and investigating claims to expose and mitigate claims involving these questionable and controversial strategies. This session will examine several case studies in which these questionable tactics have been utilized and how they can be effectively mitigated/resolved prior to litigation.

Understanding & Evaluating Remediation & Repair Estimates

Description:

Understanding and Evaluating Remediation and Repair Estimates is intended to help claims professionals learn to understand, summarize, and analyze estimates from contractors and consultants. It's not easy but it is a very valuable skill that can save lots of money. Remediation and repair projects are VERY expensive and yet so few people have the skill to analyze the fairness and value of the costs. Cost estimating is a profession with specialized skills, training, education, and certifications; but it's not rocket science. And there is some math, so it's scary to a lot of people. There are a many moving parts in a big estimate: designers, insurance, labor, materials, equipment, subcontractors... The list can go on and on. So how does a normal person without years of experience understand and evaluate an estimate? We are going to show you. Remember: Construction is not terribly difficult to understand. It's really just sticks and stones and pieces of glass and steel stacked neatly. What makes it hard is the complexity; the sheer number of components requires an organizational system. We have one and we present it in this one-hour program.

Investor Funded Litigation: Leveling the Playing Field or Funding the Takedown?

Description:

This session addresses a relatively new aspect of litigation, the involvement of “third party investors” who are recruited to literally “fund” litigation that might otherwise be too costly for individuals to pursue. Aside from the issues surrounding the legality and ethical considerations of such participation of non-parties, this topic is particularly important for claims professionals facing the challenge of evaluating risk exposures and litigation expenses when unknown “funders” may be driving the litigation for their own benefit

Are Your Consultants And Vendors Using The Same Ethics You Require Of Your Employees?*Description:

Companies require Ethics Training for their adjusters and other employees who are involved in claims handling, and require them to act ethically and treat their policyholders well. Are independent adjusters, engineers, contractors and other technical experts and consultants acting with the same level of ethics? If they are not, substantial problems, including potential liability for the company, may arise. For example, there have been reports of engineering and restoration companies editing reports and estimates with the goal of eliminating or reducing the insurance company's coverage obligations rather than providing an independent professional assessment in their area of expertise. There also have been instances where courts have found that engineering companies acted unethically in connection with an insurance claim, and those findings were admitted as evidence against the insurer on an entirely different claim. This panel will discuss methods to ensure that ethics are a priority, including what to look for and what actions to take to ensure that all people acting for or working with the company act ethically, and how to audit the work with that goal in mind.
